Acknowledgement of Risk

Participant's Name: _____

Fireside Adventures, a division of Creative Toolbox Consulting Inc., would like you to read the following carefully as it may affect you/your child's safety and the safety of others going on this trip. Once you have read it we would like you to sign the bottom of the form as an indication that you have read and understood it, and return it to us, together with the rest of your registration package.

We have taken all reasonable steps to provide you with the level of care and assurances of safety appropriate to these activities. However, you should be aware that certain inherent risks remain which are integral to the activity, and which cannot be eliminated without destroying the uniqueness of the activities.

Amongst other things, some of these risks can contribute to:

- The loss or damage of your personal clothing or equipment
- Feelings of discomfort, fear and apprehension, or even
- Accidental injury, illness, or trauma, which in extreme cases may result in death.

The level of real (as opposed to apparent) risk associated with the activities of Fireside Adventures is very low. However, the type of risks may be something with which you are not familiar. The level of risk is generally no greater than that associated with, for example, the normal play of an average person/child, or that associated with a person/child or youth undertaking recreational activities appropriate to their ability, fitness, age, etc.

Depending on which trip you are going on, you may be involved with any or all of the following. If you are not comfortable with any of these you should let that be known to us as soon as possible.

Things you may encounter include, but may not be limited to:

Rough or rugged terrain. This trip may be on mountain, forestry or rough terrain. If you are only used to footpaths, tarmac surfaces, and gentle inclines, etc., this may come as a bit of a surprise by putting greater strain on joints and muscles than you are used to.

Physical effort. Our trips involve physical effort that at times may be more than you are used to. This may involve stamina or physical strength. If you have medical conditions or injuries, past or present, which may make some activities difficult, you should make us aware of them. Rest assured however, that we could accommodate almost anyone provided we know about the condition.

Animals. We are going into a wilderness area where animals live (eg. bears, cougars). Generally wild animals want to stay away from human activity but there have been cases where humans do encounter animals. We will do our best to prevent such an occurrence – including cooking away from where we camp, hanging our food out of reach, staying as a group and providing enough noise to let animals know we are in an area. Students will be given instruction on how they can be responsible users of the wilderness.

Water activities. All normal and appropriate precautions will be taken, such as the use of buoyancy aids when appropriate. However, some situations may become stressful for some people. If you have an unusual aversion to water you should let that be known to us, although the ability to swim is NOT a requirement.

Environmental risks and hazards. These may include such factors as lightning, floods or rock-fall although the more common would be rapid and significant changes in the weather, or unstable or slippery conditions underfoot.

Transportation. Fireside Adventures trips may involve a significant amount of driving which will be done on highways, secondary roads, and gravel/logging roads. Our drivers follow all road rules including speed limits. There are risks associated with being in a vehicle. Accidents are possible and can even be fatal. We will do our best to minimize the potential for these types of risks by always driving defensively.

Cycling. Fireside Adventures trips may involve a significant amount of cycling (bike touring) that will be done on highways, secondary roads, and gravel/logging roads. Participants and staff will follow all road rules including speed limits, wearing proper cycling safety equipment. There are risks associated with being on a bike. Accidents are possible and can even be fatal. We will do our best to minimize the potential for these types of risks by teaching how to cycle defensively and following rules of the road.

Canoeing. All participants will participate in a swim test, water comfort assessment and basic canoe competency lessons. No participants are allowed in any water without direct supervision from staff. There is potential for a canoe to tip over because of poor distribution, paddling strokes or unstable water which could cause participants to become wet and/ or cold and/or anxious. Prior to any canoeing, participants will need to partake in a canoe over canoe rescue exercise and be taught water safety procedures.

Slips and trips. This is the most common type of accident throughout society and our trips are no exception. We will endeavor to ensure that the consequences of such a slip are not serious but you should be aware that the likelihood of falling over or slipping is likely to be greater than you are used to. Moreover, given the nature of the environment in which these may occur the situation can compound giving rise to a more serious incident.

Fireside Adventures has clear obligations and we take these very seriously. However, we will be expecting students to contribute to their own, and each other's safety by following the instructions leaders will, from time to time, be giving them.

Acknowledgement

I recognize:

- That this trip may require an attitude and approach different from other activities I have been involved with.
- That the nature of the risks may be different to those, which I am familiar with.
- That certain inherent risks remain.
